Pious Reflections of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. "Where there is no Mass," writes one of the Fathers of the English Oratory, "there is also no Christianity.". The reason is plain: Christ's life was one of sacrifice—not merely of the figurative sacrifice of praise and prayer, but one of outward act, of suffering and of death His religion must be like Himself: it must be the continuation of the divine-human life that He led upon earth, representing and perpetuating, by some ...

Christ is the only way we must follow, especially in the practice of virtue, and it was during the Passion that His practice of the virtues was strikingly sublime and heroic. In the most trying circumstances our Lord gave us during the Passion examples of those virtues we somehow seem to lack - meekness, mercy, charity, silence, patience, abandonment, and obedience to His Father's will - even to death.

"The Wise Thief" - A Reflection on the Passion of Christ One of the most poignant and stirring scenes in Saint Luke's account of Christ's Passion is that of the good criminal. We often call him the "good thief" or the "penitent thief" following Matthew and Mark who refer to thieves being crucified with Jesus, but since Luke calls them "criminals" I will use that designation.

No greater love ever existed than the love that Jesus manifested that Holy Thursday night and Good Friday — the day of His passion, crucifixion and death on the cross. In moments of desolation it is good for all of us to recall how much Jesus really does love us by reflecting on His Passion that he underwent for me individually.

"Putting on Christ" - A Reflection on the Passion of Christ. A man stands naked and bloody in a court. He is being whipped, beaten, spit upon, mocked, and jeered. What did he do to deserve this treatment? Did he kill someone? No, in fact, he brought a few people back from the dead. Was he cruel and despicable to the poor and widowed?
